ISRO Successfully Launches GSAT-20 Satellite Using SpaceX's Falcon 9 Rocket

- The Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) launched its most advanced communication satellite, GSAT-20, aboard SpaceX's Falcon 9 rocket from Cape Canaveral, USA.

Key Details:

- Satellite Features: GSAT-20, weighing 4,700 kg, will provide broadband services to remote areas and enable in-flight Internet connectivity. It has an operational life of 14 years.
- Significance: This marks the first time ISRO launched a satellite on a SpaceX rocket through its commercial arm, New Space India Limited (NSIL).
- Reason for Falcon 9 Choice: The satellite was too heavy for India's LVM-3 (Bahubali) rocket. ISRO opted for SpaceX as Arianespace, India's usual service provider for heavy satellite launches, currently lacks operational rockets.
- Technical Capacity: SpaceX's Falcon-9 rocket can carry payloads up to 8.3 tonnes to geostationary transfer orbit.

Q. Which satellite did ISRO recently launch using SpaceX's Falcon 9 rocket from the USA? GSAT-20
